

Contents

- What license does Railo use?
- I'm not a lawyer, please explain LGPL
- TL;DR
- Can I host a non-commercial or a commercial website using Railo?
- Can I provide non-commercial or commercial hosting using Railo?
- Can I create my own Railo installer for non-commercial or commercial purposes?
- Can I include Railo on a CD / DVD / BluRay Media?
- Can I embed Railo in my non-commercial or commercial application?
- Can I modify the source of Railo?
- How does Railo make money or stay in business?

What license does Railo use?

Railo uses the GNU Lesser General Public license version 2.1 or as it is more commonly known, LGPL v2.1.

I'm not a lawyer, please explain LGPL

There is a pretty good explanation here and even why you shouldn't use the LGPL. The 4cff.org also has an excellent PDF explaining licensing in general.

TL;DR

Can I host a non-commercial or a commercial website using Railo?

Yes!

Can I provide non-commercial or commercial hosting using Railo?

Yes!

Can I create my own Railo installer for non-commercial or commercial purposes?

Yes!

Can I include Railo on a CD / DVD / BluRay Media?

Yes!

Can I embed Railo in my non-commercial or commercial application?

Yes, provided that you've left the license and source intact.

Can I modify the source of Railo?

If you modified the source, you must provide us a patch of what was modified.

How does Railo make money or stay in business?

Railo Technologies offers: Paid Extensions (cluster scope, cfvideo and more!), Professional services, Support contracts with full SLA Training.